
"There is danger from all men. The only maxim of a free government ought to be to trust no man living with power to endanger the public liberty."

---

John Adams was the Second President of the United States, revolutionary statesman and signer of the Declaration of Independence.